Course Description

This course is required of anthropology majors but it is also applicable to behavioral science and social science majors with an interest in anthropology. It is designed to provide anthropology students, whose interests may be in cultural anthropology, archaeology, physical anthropology or related social sciences, an opportunity to engage in discussions on critical issues of the day. Such discussions will reveal both the diversity of anthropological perspectives and allow students to discover anew the core perspectives that give the discipline its coherence. In addition, students can reflect on the skills they have gained and develop strategies for utilizing their capabilities as anthropologists throughout their lives. Students will read materials concerning a variety of contemporary issues and participate in class discussions. Students will also reflect on a prepare materials related to the skills they have gained and will develop strategies for utilizing their capabilities as anthropologists throughout their lives. Prerequisites: ANTH 011 or instructor consent

Course Goals and Learning Objectives

Course Goals

1. Students will develop an understanding of anthropology as a discipline with a unique perspective that can illuminate contemporary academic and social issues. They will be exposed to the different points of view in these controversies. Accordingly, a first course goal is to allow you to assess the discipline(s) of anthropology (and, as appropriate, psychology and sociology).

2. Students will make an assessment of the proverbial “real world” in order to develop an appreciation for where and how anthropology is being used, as well as how it could be used in a variety of settings and applications. The goal here is to develop students’ ability to use anthropology and other social sciences in their careers and as informed citizens.

3. Students will develop well-grounded yet personal syntheses of anthropology and its uses, as well as the ability to present these syntheses to other people. Thus, the course will facilitate and support the students’ sense of professionalism and their preparation for careers and community life.

Course Learning Outcomes

Students who successfully complete the course will be able to:

1. analyze and evaluate various issue-related arguments, discovering and weighing underlying assumptions, and to apply the diverse theories to which they have been exposed to contemporary issues;

2. write logical and well-organized arguments based on anthropological concepts and data;

3. reflect upon their skills and knowledge as social science majors in order to develop a perspective that can be widely applied and articulated to different communities;

4. synthesize the fields of the discipline and use a variety of types of data and information; and

5. develop a sense of themselves as professionals with skills and knowledge that can support

Course Requirements and Assignments

Trigg Chapter Critiques (1 @ 20%). You will write a paper in which you explore in depth a week’s worth of Roger Trigg’s book. A complete draft of your paper is due the week after we review the topic in class, so you will have the benefit of that discussion. That draft should reflect your best possible effort, but since Trigg’s book is difficult, I will allow you to revise your draft repeatedly.

Reading Quizzes (3 @ 25% total). You will take a quiz on each of the three “umbrella books” read to prepare for the group presentations.

Group Presentation (20%). You will work in groups of 5-6 students to develop a presentation about one of the three departmental umbrellas and then make that presentation to the class.

Participation (5%). You participate by (1) doing the readings, (2) trying to answer the study questions, and (3) contributing to the small group discussion and seminar. Note that the success of the class is dependent on everyone doing the readings each week and coming to class prepared to discuss them. Individual students may be more or less prepared for those discussions on a given week; I understand that. However, if there is a pattern of not doing the readings then I reserve the right to require you to submit reading notes for grade, something I loathe doing.

Exercises (4 @ 10% total). There are four graded exercises that will ultimately help you develop the content of your portfolio.

Final Portfolio (20%). The final “exam” in the class consists of a portfolio that you create over the course of the semester. It will include (1) a cover letter, (2) letter of intent, (3) resume, (4) skills and knowledge overview and an appraisal/synthesis of your major based on the work we do developing the departmental umbrellas. You will submit drafts of various elements of the portfolio throughout the semester. I will give you feedback and you can revise and resubmit as often as you wish, but you will not receive a grade until the final portfolio.

All papers must be typed with 1” margins and numbered pages, and carefully proof read. Accuracy, depth of understanding, and elegance of presentation will be assessed. I suggest reading the draft aloud to catch errors and unwieldy writing. Having a classmate edit your paper is also excellent practice. Note: Effective this semester I will stop reading your paper when I get to the fifth mechanical (spelling, punctuation, grammar) error and return it to you ungraded. You must revise the paper, eliminate such errors (including any beyond where I stopped reading!), and resubmit it for a grade. There will be no penalty for the first revision, but a 5% reduction in grade on any second revisions, and an additional 10% on the third revision. After that? I will not grade the paper. Writing is the single most important skill you should develop in university and I have great faith that you can do so. I am happy to help you meet the standard, but I will not lower it. This policy applies to the Trigg paper and the four graded exercises. You will probably be submitting other materials (e.g. resumes, letter of intent, etc.) throughout the semester for feedback but not a grade. At the fifth mistake I will just return it to you without feedback. You can revise and clean it up, but it goes to the bottom of the grading pile! Late assignments may not be accepted and will be penalized at the discretion of the instructor. Remember that this refers only to mechanical mistakes and not to feedback about the content of the Trigg papers.

GRADING:

A = 100-90%; B = 89-80%; C = 79-70%; D = 69-60%; and F = below 60%. I do assign plus and minus grades, but not extra credit.

Classroom Protocol

This class is a mixture of lecture, seminar, and in-class group activities, and students should be aware of their own roles and that of the instructor. Regarding the former, students are expected to be present and prepared for class discussions. This means that you have completed the assigned readings, taken notes or underlined as appropriate, and thought about what you have read. In other words, mastery of the material is assumed. Being prepared means that you submit materials as per the class calendar, and that those materials reflect professional standards of writing and presentation. Sloppy work will not be taken seriously. The professor's role is to develop the structure for the class, to ensure that we conform to it, and to modify it if necessary. The instructor will also raise questions and encourage the active participation of students as discussants.

Rather than being organized class by class, it's best to think of ANTH 191 as being organized week by week. During much of the semester, we will take on a chapter of Trigg each week. We will begin on Mondays with group discussions of the weekly chapter; you will be provided with a study guide. The focus will be on comprehending Trigg's argument and that can be challenging since he is a philosopher of the social sciences and not an anthropologist. Then we will collectively read through the chapter in order to extract the relevance of the argument for anthropology and its broader importance to the social sciences. This collective reading may not conclude until the Wednesday class meeting. The week's remaining time will be spent on preparing to use anthropology in a career, regardless of what form it takes. Along the way, we will also be reading three brief anthropology books that reflect the department's three "umbrellas" and then during the final quarter of the semester you will work in groups to develop and extend one of those umbrellas and present your findings to the class.

There are a few expectations I have regarding technology use during class. First, cell phones should be shut off at all times and not allowed to ring unless you are prepared to stand up, answer the call, and summarize it for the class. Second, laptops and comparable devices may be used for taking notes, but if they become distracting in any way then they will be banned in class. Believe it or not, you'll learn more by jotting notes on paper and then revising them as you enter them later on a keyboard. Third, the internet has become both a tool for research and for cheating, especially plagiarism. This is a senior class, so there are no excuses for failing to understand integrity in general and academic integrity in particular. If you are caught plagiarizing or otherwise cheating you should expect to fail the course, which will delay your graduation.

Course Schedule

We will follow the schedule provided below and I will try to minimize any changes to it. However, sometimes changes are required and if they are to be made they will be discussed in class, often to get your input, and also announced by email to the entire class.

Credit Hours

Success in this course is based on the expectation that students will spend, for each unit of credit, a minimum of forty-five hours over the length of the course (normally 3 hours per unit per week with 1 of the hours used for lecture) for instruction or preparation/studying or course related activities including but not limited to internships, labs, clinical practica. Other course structures will have equivalent workload expectations as described in the syllabus.
