The Center for Comparative Philosophy (CCP) at San Jose State University, California, USA, has established its Workshop/Conference Series since 2009 to promote and enhance the research and scholarship of comparative philosophy understood in a philosophically interesting way. The Series emphasizes critical discussion and exploration of how distinct approaches from different philosophical traditions (generally covering both culture/region-associated and style/orientation-associated philosophical traditions) can constructively engage each other to jointly contribute to the common philosophical enterprise.

The 2011 term of the CCP Workshop/Conference Series is a symposium on the theme “Daoism and Contemporary Philosophy: Constructive Engagement”. It is to explore two closely related fronts on the theme: (1) how philosophical thoughts and resources of Daoism (such as those in the Dao-De-Jing and the Zhuang-Zi) can contribute to our understanding and treatment of a series of philosophical issues (in metaphysics, epistemology, philosophy of language and mind, moral and social/political philosophy, etc.) through their constructively engaging relevant approaches/resources in contemporary philosophy; (2) how relevant resources in contemporary philosophy can help and enhance our understanding and elaboration of philosophical points and implications of Daoism through philosophical interpretation.

The foregoing exploration is to be carried out for the sake of the constructive-engagement strategic goal and methodology of comparative philosophy, which can be briefly highlighted as follows:

To explore how, via reflective criticism (including self-criticism) and argumentation, distinct modes of thinking, methodological approaches, visions, substantial points of view, or conceptual and explanatory resources from different philosophical traditions and/or from different styles/orientations of doing philosophy, can learn from each other and jointly contribute to the common philosophical enterprise and a series of issues and topics of philosophical significance, which can be jointly concerned through appropriate philosophical interpretation and/or from a broader philosophical vantage point.

It is acknowledged that the Dr. Chaote Lin Endowment provided valuable financial support to the event.
