Peer Partners in Teaching

a collaborative faculty support program sponsored by the Center for Faculty Development

Have you ever wished you could engage in collegial discussions about teaching, without it being part of RTP?

Have you ever felt isolated in your own department, and less “at home” in the larger university community?

Have you ever wondered how other teachers handle specific classroom situations? These are some of the many issues that have stimulated collaborative discussions at the Peer Partners in

Teaching sessions:

- stimulating and guiding student discussions
- facilitating more active student participation
- communicating effectively with students re: cheating, plagiarism, or poor performance
- creating a safe space for sharing in the classroom
- fostering more student interest in a subject
- soliciting student feedback to improve your teaching before the class is over?

Have you every wanted to visit another professor’s classroom to see how they teach? In Peer Partners you will have the opportunity to observe another professor and also be observed by that person to share teaching strategies .

Peer Partners in Teaching is an enjoyable, non-threatening way to broaden your skills as a teacher while increasing your sense of connection to the larger SJSU campus community!

Peer Partners in Teaching is for ALL faculty:

- part time and full time
- tenure track or tenured
- lecturers and permanent faculty
- those who have participated in PPT in previous years
