MISSION STATEMENT:
The mission of the Department of Counselor Education is to prepare guidance and counselor candidates who will promote equality and excellence for all students in an increasingly diverse and technologically complex global community.

COURSE DESCRIPTION:
The role of research in education and society; procedures in selection and evaluation of research projects; and techniques of research data analysis will be examined. Three units.

COURSE PURPOSE: The design of this course: (1) provides an overview of the theory, procedures, application and use of research in educational settings; (2) assists in the study of a specific area of applied research from the current professional literature; and (3) assists in the development of a specific research proposal. Many students use this seminar to develop their thesis or research project topic, but this is not a course requirement.

METHOD OF INSTRUCTION: The course will include lectures, class discussions, activities and group work. Small group discussions will also be important components of the course.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:
• Provide an opportunity to learn about research and its application in the field of education.
• Read the professional literature in an area of interest to help define the current professional perspective.
• Develop a problem statement that is researchable based on that current professional perspective.
• Generate testable hypotheses or research questions that address the problem statement.
• Review relevant professional literature pertaining to the problem statement.
• Generate a list of references showing the sources and methods used in the literature search.
• Develop a research design appropriate for the problem statement and hypotheses/research questions that describes the sampling procedures, the dependent and independent variables, measurement tools/instruments, data gathering procedures, and statistical procedures for data analysis.
• Become familiar with the manuscript styles of the current Publication manual of the American Psychological Association (APA) (available at the Spartan Bookstore).
• Write a research proposal in thesis or project format following the current Publication manual of the American Psychological Association.

Course Requirements and Grading Procedure: All graded activities provide practical "hands-on" experience in doing applied research. Forming research teams is useful for completing course requirements. This course requires an 'A', 'B', 'C' etc grading system. Note the weights for each graded activity. Completion of all graded activities sum to form your final grade. Graded activities are:

Participation: Actively participate in seminar activities. Evaluation reflected in completing assignments below.

* Problem/Purpose Statements (10pts): This is a brief presentation (usually one sentence each) of your research topic including the problem to be explored and a purpose statement of what aspect of the problem will be the focus of the research. A sample is provided on DTL. (Due Sept 25).

* Literature Review Outline & Bibliography (10pts): This is a brief outline of the major headings and subheadings to show the organization for the literature review. Include an alphabetical list (APA format) of the references so far. (Due Oct 9).

* Research Design Outline (10pts): This is a brief presentation describing how you plan to carry out your research. Use appropriate sections explained in the Writer’s Guide (ex: Participants, Theoretical Rationale and Outline of Handbook or Workshop). If appropriate, include relevant descriptions of the research plan, your sampling procedures, the dependent and independent variables, measurement tools or instruments, data gathering procedures, and data analysis procedures (Due Oct 23).

* Peer Review and Editing of Proposal (10pts): Students will report to the seminar on the development of their research proposal. Please bring an outline for instructor and fellow students and prepare to speak for 2-5 minutes. Choose one week scheduled at the end of the semester. No need to rsvp.

NOTE: You should be writing at a Master’s Level. I will not be your editor and will not correct for grammar/spelling. It is your responsibility to find an editor to check you work. Your grade will suffer from incorrect grammar, spelling, and punctuation.
* Oral and Written Presentation of Proposal (300pts): This is a written proposal in thesis or project format with references following the current Publication manual of the American Psychological Association. This will be presented in an oral presentation scheduled for last class meetings. The proposal will include:

- Chapter I   Introduction  Due Nov 13   (100pts)
- Chapter II  Review of Literature  Due Nov 20   (100pts)
