COURSE DESCRIPTION: This is a workshop class. You will spend a majority of in-class time workshopping short stories written by you and your classmates. In addition, you will read a number of published American short stories written between the early 19th century and the present. We will spend some time discussing these stories, and I will give occasional, unannounced reading quizzes on stories assigned from the only required text in the course. All reading assignments are included on the schedule at the end of this syllabus. I've also included partial explanations of your required fiction-writing and fiction-critiquing assignments. All of your written work for this workshop class will be included in an end-of-the-semester Portfolio. You will write two complete stories and revise both. Each story should be at least eight double-spaced pages in length. The final drafts of the two stories combined must constitute at least 20 pages of revised fiction. The first story you write will be told in the first-person. The second story will be told in the third-person. We will discuss these two kinds of storytelling at length in class. Point-of-view, voice, and style are as important as plot, character, and setting in the making of a successful story. Final drafts of all stories should be nearly error-free, as they would be if you were sending a story or stories to an agent or to a publication. Professional readers have no interest in stories containing grammatical and technical mistakes. This workshop class should be fun, but it also needs to be rigorous. In order to improve as a writer, each of you needs to be open to suggestions and helpful criticism, both from fellow students and from me. Of course suggestions and criticism should always be expressed in a helpful and courteous way. We are all involved in this workshop class in order to improve our fiction writing and to help others improve theirs.

PREREQUISITES: Passage of the WST; upper-division standing

STUDENT LEARNING OBJECTIVES FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH & COMPARATIVE LITERATURE:

1. Students will demonstrate the ability to read closely in a variety of forms, styles, structures, and modes, and articulate the value of close reading in the study of literature, creative writing, rhetoric, or film.
2. Students will demonstrate the ability to show familiarity with major literary works, genres, periods, and critical approaches in British, American, and World Literature.
3. Students will demonstrate the ability to write clearly, effectively, and creatively, and adjust writing style appropriately to the content, context, and nature of the subject.
4. Students will demonstrate the ability to develop and carry out research projects, and locate, evaluate, organize, and incorporate information effectively.
5. Students will demonstrate the ability to articulate relations among culture, history & texts.

DEPARTMENT LEARNING OBJECTIVES COVERED ARE LISTED NEXT TO ASSIGNMENTS

ASSESSMENT: All student writing shall be assessed for grammar, clarity, conciseness, and coherence. In accordance with the approved assessment plan, the course coordinator/department chair will summarize the assessment result for English 130 sections according to the standard procedure.

REQUIRED TEXT:
THE OXFORD BOOK OF AMERICAN SHORT STORIES, 2ND EDITION. Ed. Joyce Carol Oates. Oxford University Press, 2013. [Be absolutely certain you buy the 2nd EDITION!!!!]

IMPORTANT: BRING THIS BOOK TO EVERY CLASS!!!!
WRITING ASSIGNMENTS: Writing assignments include two short stories of at least eight double-spaced pages in length each and at least twenty double-spaced pages total. Rough drafts of each story workshopped in class; the writer must provide a copy to each class member a week before the workshop session. I will provide each student with a worksheet to fill out for each story workshopped. Both stories workshopped must be rewritten in fully revised draft. The end-of-semester Portfolio will include both stories in both forms: workshopped rough draft and fully revised draft. The Portfolio will also include all worksheets filled out by class members and by me for the rough drafts of the two stories. Remember, the first story must be written in the first person, the second story in the third person. All stories workshopped must be original work written for this class and for no other class. In addition, the occasional unannounced in-class quizzes on assigned reading will also be included in the Portfolio.

GRADING:
Occasional unannounced in-class quizzes on required reading assignments  20%
Rough Draft of First Story (first-person)  20%
Rough Draft of Second Story (third-person)  20%
Portfolio (especially full revisions of first and second story)  40%
