The very act of writing assumes, to begin with, that someone cares to hear what you have to say. It assumes that people share, that people can be reached, that people can be touched and even in some cases changed. So many of the things in our world lead us to despair. It seems to me that the final symptom of despair is silence, and that storytelling is one of the sustaining arts; it’s one of the affirming arts. A writer may have a certain pessimism in his outlook, but the very act of being a writer seems to me to be an optimistic act.

COURSE DESCRIPTION
English 135 is an advanced writing workshop in Creative Nonfiction (also referred to by some as the New Journalism, or Literary Journalism). You will read a variety of forms of the genre and learn a great deal about topics other than literature—which is the beauty of nonfiction—and this fall we’ll have a special emphasis on California as a state and state of mind. During the course of the semester you'll write a personal essay, a travel story, a profile, and a feature article. The various pieces you write will leave a nonfiction record of your world as you see it today, examining your own life, the physical planet, the people you share it with, and hopefully look at some of the forces that are driving them all.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES
 Explore four subgenres of nonfiction: the personal essay, travel writing, profiles and feature articles.
 Develop the skills of a thoughtful editor.
 Become an active part of a literary community, through writing, editing, discussion, attending events and becoming a participant in our class dialogue.
GUIDELINES
In order to be successful in this course there are some simple guidelines to follow. First among these is to come to class prepared to participate. This means having done the assignments, read the material, then arriving equipped with questions, comments, and observations. In this class we will learn a great deal from each other, so discussion and creating a community of writers/critics is an integral part of the process. We will be looking at writing from many perspectives, so your ideas count.

The second guideline is to think and plan well ahead of assignments. Begin from day one to anticipate your schedule, topics for papers, research sources, etc. And third, if you have any questions with which you need further assistance, please feel free to consult me during my office hours. I am available via email, but only for brief questions; this medium should not be considered a substitute for an in-person conversation.

WORKSHOP
You will learn to critique other authors' work, which is a very different skill than being a talented writer. The trick is to 1) praise what's good 2) ascertain what's wrong with a piece 3) offer positive criticism and suggestions on how to fix it—while realizing the individual style and goals of the author may differ from your own. You will be divided into small workshop groups and will remain in these groups for the whole semester.

WRITING ASSIGNMENTS
You will be writing in four levels of increasing length and complexity. The first, completely informal level, is your in-class writing exercises. The second is short assignments of two pages in length; these will offer opportunities for you to experiment with different ideas and styles—completely free of risk—as you will be given credit for merely completing the assignment. The third category is the drafts of your full-length essays that you will workshop in class. The fourth category is the final version of the four major assignments, which will be graded. These should be 1,500-2,500 words in length and will be graded for overall quality. Naturally, all papers must be nonfiction, i.e. true stories.

ATTENDANCE
Required, because English 135 depends on your participation each class to function as a literary community. If you are ill, or are presented with an emergency that will cause you to miss more than two classes, please contact me as soon as possible.

CLASS ETIQUETTE
Please observe the following: no eating during class, no laptop use, and of course, no cell phone use.

The difference between fiction and reality?
Fiction has to make sense.
— Tom Clancy
The two most engaging powers of an author are to make new things familiar and familiar things new.
— Samuel Johnson

GRADES
Your final grade will be comprised of the following:

- Personal Essay 20%
- Travel Essay 20%
- Profile 20%
- Feature Article 20%
- Class Participation 10%
- Short Assignments 10%

Grades are meant to reflect, quite simply, the quality of your work. Ninety percent of your grade will be based on your writing, and your assignments will be judged on their creativity, clarity, content, and the quality of the prose. Since this is an upper-division course, it is a given that you have a fundamental mastery of the proper mechanics of standard written English, like punctuation and grammar. Misuses of these will count against your grade. When I finish reading a piece I should feel that you, as a writer, had something important to say—not that it was a waste of my time. There are no exams for this class.

IMPORTANT NOTE: One of the vital aspects of this course is learning how to manage and schedule the different aspects of a writing project, especially ones involving research. For this reason, deadlines are extremely important. The grade for any paper handed in late, whether for the draft workshop, or the final, will immediately be reduced by one letter grade. In other words, if you receive a C on a paper, but handed in late work, your final grade on the assignment will be a D. Students must complete and turn in all four papers in order to PASS the class.

Grading Guidelines:
A paper: has a creative approach, polished prose free of mechanical problems, keeps the reader's interest, is organized logically, flows smoothly, impresses the reader with the author's ethos and command of the topic, was delivered on deadline and within the appropriate word count.
B paper: has all the above except may contain one or two minor areas for improvement.
C paper: C is considered "average" by departmental policy. Usually a C paper offers lackluster creativity and/or content and needs further refinement at the prose level.
D paper: is either substantially shorter than the required word count, or has so many problem areas that it is difficult to follow because it contains poorly-crafted content or a plethora of mechanical problems. It is below the standard of writing acceptable for an upper-division undergraduate course.
F paper: is a failure to achieve the majority of requirements outlined above for an A paper. Note that plusses or minuses may be added to grades that are in between two letter grades.
Writing is a form of personal freedom.
It frees us from the mass identity we see in the making all around us.
In the end, writers will write not to be outlaw heroes
of some underculture but mainly to save themselves,
to survive as individuals.
— Don Delillo

PAPER FORMAT
All material handed in should follow the same guidelines as those for submitting professional manuscripts:
• typewritten, double-spaced, black ink with copy dark enough to be easily read
• one-inch margins on all sides
• text on one side of the paper only
• 12-point type in a highly-legible font, preferably Times New Roman or Courier New
• your name and the assignment title single-spaced in the upper left-hand corner of the first sheet
• title centered on the first page
• pages numbers included
• pages stapled or paper clipped together

Points will be subtracted for improper formatting.
