Only success, and that at a perilous peak, can give relief, but for artists without an art, it is always tension without release, irritation with no resulting pearl. Possibly there would be if the pressure to succeed were not so tremendous. They feel compelled to prove something, because middle-class America, from which they mostly spring, has withering words for its men of feeling, for its young of experimental intelligence, who do not show immediately that these endeavors pay off on a cash basis. But if a civilization falls, is it cash the inheritors find among the ruins? Or is it a statue, a poem, a play?

REED MISSION STATEMENT
With roots that run back to 1867 on the San José State University campus, Reed is the oldest literary journal west of the Mississippi. We publish outstanding fiction, poetry, nonfiction, and art from around the globe.

COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course is a two-semester sequence in which students produce this year’s issue of Reed, the San José State literary magazine. Students will perform all editorial duties, including reading submissions, selling advertising, designing the layout, promoting the issue, and distributing the finished product. Previous experience editing a literary magazine (i.e., in high school or at another college) is not required but is certainly an asset.

THE GILROY PROJECT
For the next edition of Reed, we will be working on creating an examination of the shooting which happened at the Gilroy Garlic Festival. Anyone who has ideas or wants to contribute to this project is welcome; the end result may be in the print issue, on the web, or both, depending on the direction it takes.
THE REED BRAND
Reed prides itself on being a California creation, more specifically a product of the Bay Area, and with that recognition goes an emphasis on the region’s incredible natural beauty and the gift of our diversity. That our roots run deep in the Golden State’s history, making us the oldest literary journal in the West, should be at the forefront of all artistic and editorial decisions. While Reed is produced at a university, by students, we do not consider ourselves a “school magazine” and this association is to be avoided. Like the Missouri Review or Iowa Review, which are likewise produced on university campuses, but publish the work of professional authors and artists, Reed is not limited to the output of our SJSU student body.

We target our journal primarily toward our audience of intelligent, literary readers, many of whom are writers themselves. Their demographics are: college educated, 20-60 years old, residents primarily of cities and college towns around the USA, academics, and again, fellow writers.

STUDENT LEARNING GOALS
❖ Understanding the process required to produce a periodical publication
❖ Ability to organize tasks around a deadline
❖ Ability to read and evaluate submissions as editors
❖ Face-to-face exchange of ideas with faculty and fellow students in a classroom, in office visits, and in shared activities on and off campus

4-UNIT COURSE WORKLOAD
Because this is a 4-unit course, students can expect to spend a minimum of twelve hours per week preparing for and attending classes and completing course assignments. This course will have integrated into the syllabus the following 1-unit enhancement: increased course content and reports.

REQUIRED TEXTS AND SUPPLIES
Reed #152 - You are required to read the most recent issue of Reed (Issue152), if you have not done so already. I will provide copies of Reed.

Another litmag of your choice - For the Journal Report assignment, you are required to purchase a current issue of a reputable print literary journal. These are stocked at most bookstores in the magazine area. To get you started with ideas, peruse the list of journals at http://www.clmp.org/directory/.

Laptop - Most of Reed’s business is conducted online. All submissions, for example, come to us through our website, http://www.reedmag.org; the content is then managed by Submittable, a cloud-based online platform used by thousands of publishers and organizations. Staff will log in to this system to view and edit material. You may use the laptops provided in Sweeney Hall or bring your own laptop to class if you prefer.
In literature, as in love, we are astonished at the choices made by other people.
—Andre Maurois

COURSE REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING
This course requires a mix of individual and group work. I will grade all assignments on quality and thoroughness, taking into account that group work rarely reflects equal effort by all members of the group. The mantra of each team member should be “I will keep my commitments.”

Entrepreneurial spirit is greatly appreciated and will be rewarded. In other words, it is your responsibility in this course to find opportunities to make yourself useful and to come up with creative solutions to problems—and the publication of Reed is one big exercise in problem solving.

Prompt and efficient communication with the professor, your teammates, and other teams is essential, and for this reason it is highly rated in your overall grade. Reed staff will use their sjsu.edu email addresses for all work-related correspondence and you are required to check this email each weekday and reply promptly, even if it is just to say, “I received your email and I'm working on it.” One of the great mistakes people make in the professional arena is “hiding out,” thinking that because they haven’t completed a task—or worse still, don’t want to do the task requested—they will ignore email. In a deadline-driven enterprise like ours this is the route to failure.

Participation in class discussions is also important because your ideas contribute to the shape of the magazine. Overall, your grade will be based on your commitment to the successful publication of Reed. If at any point in the semester you would like to discuss your performance in the course, come see me during office hours.

Final grades will be determined by the following:
Participation & Effort on Production Team Projects 70%
Class Participation & Communication 20%
Journal Report 10%

IMPORTANT NOTE: One of the vital aspects of this course is learning how to manage and schedule the different aspects of a project. For this reason, deadlines are extremely important. The grade for any work past deadline will immediately be reduced by one letter grade. In other words, if you earned a C, but missed your deadline, your final grade on the assignment will be a D at best, and may be lower depending on how late the project is past deadline. It is extremely important to keep your commitments to your team, and to the class, in order to produce a magazine on schedule.
Language is a road map of a culture.
It tells you where its people come from and where they are going.
— Rita Mae Brown

DEPARTMENTAL GRADING POLICY
The Department of English reaffirms its commitment to the differential grading scale as defined in the official SJSU Catalog (“The Grading System”). Grades issued must represent a full range of student performance: A = excellent; B = above average; C = average; D = below average; F = failure. Note that plusses or minuses may be added to grades that are in between two letter grades.

INDIVIDUAL ASSIGNMENTS

Journal Report – You will read one print edition of a literary journal and present a short report on its style (layout, design, organization) and content (the substance of the writing in the journal) to the class. You should compare and contrast the journal to the most recent issue of Reed, making sure to highlight any qualities you think Reed should imitate. Please bring in a copy of the magazine for show and tell, make a five-minute presentation to the class, and turn in a printed two-page report, due the day of your presentation. Note that many journals can be ordered online, but can take weeks—or months!—to arrive.

GROUP WORK

Our mission for this term is to take the art and literature chosen by our staff in the fall semester and produce the next issue. At the start of the semester each student will be assigned a production team; your work as part of this team will be your primary contribution for the spring.

Production teams will cover all the tasks necessary to produce a publication, e.g. design of the magazine and website, copyediting, outreach, promotions, sales and distribution. Members of each production team work closely together and leadership positions are usually given to graduate students or those with relevant experience. Enthusiasm and dedication to produce a quality product are also important contributions. Remember that the great thing about this class is that at the end of the semester you will have a portfolio piece with your name on it to show for all your hard work—which can be a helpful tool when entering the job market.

Artists and poets are the true historians of human existence.
— Rhoda Curtis
Time comes into it.
Say it. Say it.
The universe is made of stories,
not of atoms.
— Muriel Rukeyser

CLASS MEETINGS & ATTENDANCE
This seminar is scheduled to meet for three hours one day a week. The "lecture" part of these meetings is minimal. We will use the remainder of the time for group work. As deadlines approach, I expect that teams will meet outside of normal class hours as well. We have all made time in our schedules to be here in the classroom. As a courtesy to your fellow staff members, please be on time.

Although absences are not directly used as a factor for grades, it is impossible to participate in our mission if you are not present. To this extent, I will take roll each class, and students who come in after roll call will be considered absent. If you are ill, or are presented with an emergency that will cause you to miss more than one class, please contact me as soon as possible.

CLASS PROTOCOL
During class time laptop use should be limited to Reed production, which with our current editorial mission does not include surfing Tinder. The use of laptops or cell phones is forbidden during the lecture portion of the class; it is considered bad form to ignore your professor or fellow Reedies while they are presenting. You are expected to treat all your colleagues with the respectful, professional behavior worthy of the staff of a 150-year-old publication.

TEAMWORK

Production Teams
Each student will select a Production Team on which you will serve for the whole semester. NOTE: the Faculty Advisor reserves the right to assign members to teams as needed, but she, in her infinite generosity, will try to give you your first or second choice of positions. Some of these positions, such as Sales, have already had an active role in the previous term, but most production teams will begin working in earnest this semester.

❖ Copyediting & Proofreading (5) Duties include:
  • Copyedit all accepted content and work with authors to approve changes
  • Members of this team also provide the second (and third, and fourth) set of eyes, reviewing the layout before it goes to print

❖ Community Outreach (3) Duties include:
  • Research new opportunities to bring Reed into the community, e.g. into high schools and community college classrooms
  • Coordinate with other regional arts organizations to spread recognition about Reed

❖ Design & Layout (5) Duties include:
  • Design the cover for the next issue
  • Layout Reed in Adobe InDesign, an industry-standard software package for desktop publishing
  • Important qualifications are computer skills, attention to detail, and ability to work on deadline
  • Note that this is one of the most demanding but ultimately rewarding jobs on the magazine

❖ Marketing & Promotion (5) Duties include:
  • Advertising submission deadlines
  • Growing the number of applicants to our contests to generate revenue
  • Preparing for the AWP Bookfair (www.awpwriter.org/awp_conference/bookfair_overview)
  • Creating all advertising and publicity related to the launch of Reed
  • Making sure all messaging stays on target for the Reed brand
  • Promoting Reed through social media
  • Planning the launch party

❖ Sales & Distribution (4) Duties include:
  • Staff sales tables at Center for Literary Arts readings and other local literary events
  • Fulfill mail and online orders as they come in
  • Become familiar with the benefits local businesses enjoy by advertising in Reed (the sales pitch)
  • Contact ad sales leads, in person or on the phone
  • Work with advertisers on text and graphics for their ads (in conjunction with the Design Team)
  • Contact bookstores (chains, independents, college and university bookstores, etc.) and secure commitments for carrying Reed
  • Distribute copies of the magazine to all outlets that agree to carry it

❖ Web (3) Duties include:
  • Update the Reed website (http://www.reedmag.org)
  • Publish web-only content
  • Expand Reed’s electronic reach
  • Create a digital version of last year’s journal for tablets
