Friction

Exp 5: Static Friction

As applied force increases, static friction force increases to keep block at rest.

Block begins to move when applied force equals maximum static friction force.

Once block is in motion, static friction is replaced by weaker kinetic friction force.

Slight vibrations of the string can push the system “over this hump” preventing maximum static friction force from being reached.