As a child develops into an adult, his or her imagination acts as the key to their many adventures. It is their way of making sense of the many questions that they formulate within their developing minds. It may also act as their escape into an imaginary world where there are no problems to face or obstacles to overcome. As a child, my imaginative world of Azkaban was where I spent my many terror filled nights fighting for the hand of the prince against the sapphire eyed dragon king, Brent Sunders. Alongside my imaginary friend Horsey, we dominated kingdoms of faraway lands and undersea escapades. My imagination was the key to how I was able to understand why the world was full of terror and pain.

I chose to base my unit of study on fantasy because I believe it acts as the starting point of the writing process for some. A great writer has to have a starting point in formulating what he or she wants the plot of the story to become, especially in fantasy. There are many ideas that a writer may draw from in order to create an interesting story after he or she has brainstormed about what type of story should be written. Fantasy is one of the best selling genres in the world as it caters to the needs of a reader. Fantasy has branched out into many forms, such the classic romance novel of having Fabio caress their body sensually and fulfill their needs. As I have stated prior, fantasy acts as an escape for someone to unwind after a long day at school or work. It has been around for centuries for many to enjoy and the classic tales that we grow up listening to.
As my canonical work, I decided to use the classical Harry Potter and the Sorcerer’s Stone because it was the first book that got me involved in reading. Following the journey of a young man as he grows up and faces the peril of not just the dark arts but of puberty can relate to teenagers of all ages. Growing up is not the easiest thing to handle as a young adult faces the production of hormones and the changing of his or her body. Their interests begin to widen from just playing sports or doing your nails to noticing the opposite sex. Furthermore, Harry, alongside his friends, is faced with the issue of being bullied by Draco and his mates every time they come face to face. Teens are bullied by others everywhere in the world and some have taken the drastic measure of committing suicide. Although Harry and his friends face the terror of Draco, they confide in one another to get through the obstacles they face. Friendship plays a big part in how the story is allowed to progress throughout the series. It acts as a tie to one another that allow us to confide in someone we trust to get through our troubles.

Launching the Unit

- Ask the students to define: what is fantasy?
  - The literal definition of fantasy is “an imagined or conjured up sequence fulfilling a psychological need; daydream”

- http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=geNIXmmlp7w. I would use this trailer as a comparison between the definition he or she created and ask the students to tell me if their definition fits what they saw

During the Unit

- Have the students keep a journal to document their SSW’s.
• After each chapter, the students will then dive into answering the SSW question of the day.

• Following the response session, I’ll have the students do a pair share or a class discussion of what he or she wrote as an answer.

And the Azkaban guards heard Black muttering in his sleep, "He's at Hogwarts...he's at Hogwarts." Harry Potter isn't safe, not even within the walls of his magical school, surrounded by his friends. Because on top of it all, there may well be a traitor in their midst.

Concluding the Unit

- As a final exam, the students will be given the choice to either do a comparison between the movie version of the book and the book, a character between the centerpiece and one of the others, or to examine one particular character closer.

- In the case they choose to do the movie comparison, I would have them answer the following questions:
  - Did the movie make your imagined image of a character come to life?
  - Did the movie stick closely to what the book entailed?
  - Now having seen the movie version, which one is better? Why?
  - Did the movie fulfill you as much as the book did?

- In the case they were to choose the character comparison, I would have them answer the following questions:
  - What are the similarities between the two characters? What are the differences?
  - Examine both character’s and explain how he or she could have overcame the obstacles he or she is faced with.

- In the case they were to choose the character analysis, I would have them answer the following questions:
  - Examine the character in the form of the hero’s journey. Provide specific examples, with detail, of what the character must undergo
  - What part does this character play in the plot of the storyline?
Why a unit on Fantasy?

* Growing up, the human imagination may create a temporary friend for one to confide in. Children are known to come up with their own adventures and carry on into the peril of the volcano or the dragons lair.
