Catalog Course Description:

Historical development of philosophy of law and constitutional provisions, legal definitions, classification of crime, case law, methodology, and concepts of criminal law as a social force. No prerequisites.

Course Objectives:

1. To understand the theories of the criminal law.
2. To trace the development of American criminal law and the common law/statutory distinction.
3. To distinguish between tort and crime.
4. To understand the general principles of criminal culpability.
5. To understand justifications, defenses, and excuses.
6. To distinguish between crimes against persons and crimes against property.

Course Requirements:

Required Text: Joel Samaha, Criminal Law, 7th ed. Since there have been major changes from edition to edition of this textbook, you will need to get the 7th edition, the earlier editions are not current and the page numbers for assignments will not match earlier editions. It is available in the bookstore.

Reading Assignments: Please complete all reading assignments before the class in which they are to be discussed. All tests, class discussions, and the final exams will be based on these readings. There will not be a large number of pages to read for each class, but students will be expected to know them well.

Testing and Evaluation: There will be approximately seven in-class tests during the course periods and a final exam that will be administered at the final exam time assigned by the university in the Spring 2003 Schedule of classes. Of the in-class tests, every student may either miss one test or have the lowest test score dropped from the course grade calculation. These in-class tests will be administered approximately every second week of the semester. The precise dates of these in-class tests is not specified in advance in order to encourage class attendance and class preparedness. Class participation may also be taken into account in the final grading to the extent of one half-grade upward or downward. The total of the five in-class tests that will count for each student is 70% of the final grade. The final exam will also count for 30% of the final grade. The in-class tests and the final exam may cover anything discussed in class as well as the assigned readings up to that point in the course.

Class Discussion: Prepare be prepared to discuss everything in the reading assignments.

Other: Please see SJSU Catalog for the Add/Drop regulations, policies regarding grades of Incomplete, and for all issues of plagiarism and other questions of academic conduct. Students with disabilities who desire accommodation should see the instructor at the beginning of the semester. Classroom evacuation procedures are posted adjacent to the room.
