Course Description

This course deals with sport as a pervasive and politicized form of culture in the United States. Central to Sport in America are the ways in which sport shapes the identities of people across diverse social groups (race, ethnicity, class, gender, sexual orientation, age, and ability) within the context of larger social and cultural forces. Social meanings and the experiences associated with sport participation for these diverse groups are directly related to ideology and power in society, for not only is sport a microcosm of larger society, but an institution in which individuals and groups can struggle against discrimination and oppression to attain a greater degree of agency. In other words, sport can reproduce and reinforce dominant beliefs and values, or serve as a landscape for social transformation and increased equality and social justice. This course fulfills Area S (Self, Society and Equality in the United States) of SJSU Studies.

Course Goals (CO) and Student Learning Objectives (SLO)

Upon completion of the course, students will be able to:

Area S Objective 1: describe how religious, gender, ethnic, racial, class, sexual orientation, disability, and/or age identity are shaped by cultural and societal influences in contexts of equality and inequality.

Course Objective 1: The idea that identities are socially-constructed and intimately tied to issues of power and privilege is central to the course. Students will explore how their identities are shaped in part by the dominant values and norms of American society, and how the largely conservative institution of sport attempts to teach individuals from diverse social groups to conform to the values and norms of the dominant American culture. Students will also examine how characteristics that are unique to sport can contribute to identity formation that sometimes runs counter to prevailing societal norms (e.g. athlete privileges within legal system, proscribed violence within hockey, culture of misogyny within football locker rooms, etc.). The interaction between athletic identity and other lines of identity (e.g. racial, ethnic, gender, sexual orientation, disability, age) will also be central to “Sport in America.”

Area S Objective 2: Describe historical, social, political, and economic processes producing diversity, equality, and structured inequalities in the United States.

Course Objective 2: Students investigate historical, sociocultural, political, and economic processes that have contributed to increased social justice within sport, as well as forces that have impeded greater equality, autonomy, and social justice within American sport. Through engaging with topics such as the desegregation of baseball, the corporatization of professional and college sport, and the institutionalization of sport within the U.S. educational system from various theoretical perspectives, students will be in a favorable position from which to critique the various social processes at work within sport.

Area S Objective 3: Describe social actions by religious, gender, ethnic, racial, class, sexual orientation, disability, and/or age groups leading to greater equality and social justice in the United States.

Course Objective 3: Students will examine and discuss how power manifests itself in American sport, and how athletes from diverse social groups negotiate for increased autonomy and opportunity within the confines of sport. Specifically, students will identify and discuss forms of material (e.g. financial compensation), status (e.g. prejudice, insults), and ideological (justification for keeping non-whites out of country club golf courses) domination that have occurred in sport, and the social actions athletes have taken in their efforts to resist the dominant power structure through open, as well as more subtle, means. Students will also be able to describe how athletes’ struggles have worked to promote change in other spheres of American life (e.g. Billie Jean King’s victory as larger social commentary on gender relations).

Area S Objective 4: Recognize and appreciate constructive interactions between people from different cultural, racial, and ethnic groups in the United States

Course Objective 4: Students will explore constructive interactions between people of various cultural, racial, and ethnic groups in the sporting arena, and how these interactions inform/are informed by power relations. Students will also analyze times when interactions between individuals from different cultural, racial, and ethnic groups have given rise to tension, followed by dialogue and negotiation. A final aspect of this objective involves the contention that sport has the potential to provide a common language that may facilitate more harmonious relations between diverse groups outside of sport.

Assignments and Grading Policy

Class will be a combination of lecture, seminar, small group discussion, in-class reflection and writing and watching and reflecting upon videos. Since a significant portion of the course is driven by discussion and dialogue, it will be extremely important for each student to thoroughly read each assignment before arriving in class on the day that each topic is to be discussed. In other words, a considerable part of the success of this class is dependent on your thoughtful contributions. While perspectives on particular, often controversial, topics may vary, it is expected that the classroom environment remain a respectful space to have meaningful discussions about the role and impact of sport in contemporary American society.

Assignments

1. Quizzes: There will be 20 quiz points spread out over the semester, likely every Tuesday. Quizzes will cover the reading or screening for the week.
2. Critical Sport Autobiography Paper

With the idea that identity is intimately tied to issues of power and privilege and is importantly shaped by societal forces, students will write a critical autobiography about how play, game, sport, and/or physical activity participation have contributed to your identity (race, ethnic, cultural, class, gender, sexual orientation, etc.). Think about what sport or games you played growing up, with whom did you/ do you play, and which people influenced you the most in you play. Informal games or organized sport should be included, as well as any other relevant activities.

You are the expert on your story, but avoid simply documenting your participation in sport, rather, pay attention to the impact both positive and negative, that your sport participation has had on your understanding of who you are and how it has helped to inform your identity. Regardless of whether you have ever been a “superstar,” we are interested in your thoughtful reflections on your experiences of how sport has informed your identity.

It is expected that students will incorporate a discussion of relevant theoretical issues in this paper as well as utilize appropriate primary resources to reference important themes. Students are required to cite at least five (5) primary sources (i.e. academic journal articles, etc.) in the paper (APA Style). The required length of the paper is 4-6 double-spaced typewritten pages. Criteria for evaluation of the paper include: 1) content, 2) integration of relevant class theory and materials/references, 3) writing clarity, and 4) originality. See online rubric for details.

3. Social and Political Actions in the Arena

For this assignment, students are to identify an individual or group in sport that has been subjected to some form of oppression or injustice, and to describe social actions taken by the individual or group in their struggles for greater equality and power. In the paper, students should also outline the arguments made by those who attempted to resist change.

Students should attempt to tie whatever issues they raise with larger social issues outside of sport, and describe how the actions taken by the chosen individual or group have or have not affected American society and culture. Some suggested topics might involve individuals or groups that have been confronted by oppressive or unjust practices/policies related to issues of race/ethnicity, class, gender, sexual orientation, religion, disability, or age.

Students are also encouraged to draw from the entire history of American sport for this assignment. Students are required to cite at least five (5) primary sources (i.e. academic journal articles, etc.) in the paper (APA Style). Paper topics must be approved by the instructor. The required length of the paper is 5-7 double-spaced pages. Criteria for evaluation of the paper include: 1) content, 2) organization & structure 3) integration of relevant theory and class materials, 4) writing clarity, and 5) originality. See on line rubric for details.
