Scimat (Science Matters) is the new multidiscipline that treats all human-dependent matters as part of science, wherein, humans are studied scientifically from the perspective of complex systems. It encourages collaboration between the humanists and natural scientists. As our world (and job market) is ever changing, rapidly and unpredictably, and problem solving in the real world knows no disciplinary boundaries, interdisciplinary education and teaching have become important in universities worldwide. Accordingly, this fifth international conference in the biennial series covers Interdisciplinary Education, General Education, and Interdisciplinary Teaching. It features reviews by top experts from around the world, plus contributed papers.
