

The Road - Unraveling Its Green and Literary Qualities

Thursday, March 18, 2010

2:00 – 3:00 pm

ENG 285

The Road by Cormac McCarthy, recently made into a movie, tells the story of a father and son trying to survive in a world that has mostly been destroyed. This acclaimed, end-of-the-world novel was an Oprah's Book Club selection in 2003 and won the 2006 Pulitzer Prize for Literature.

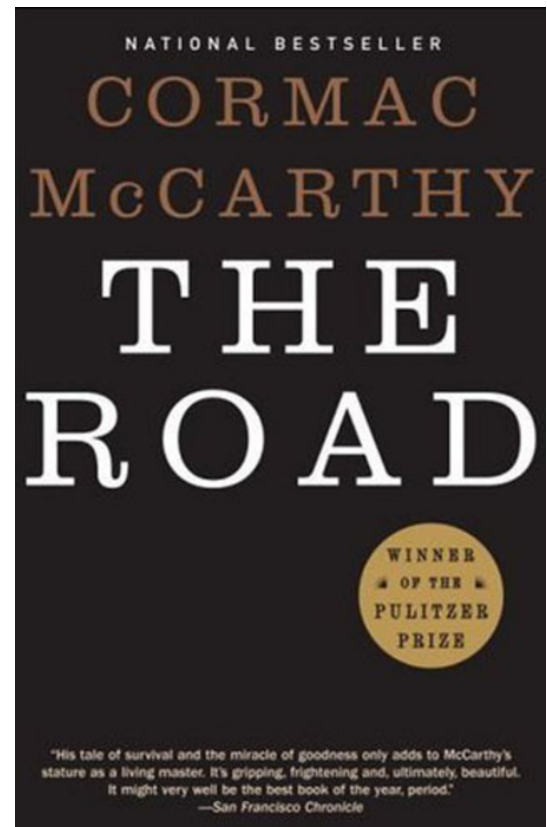

There are many intriguing themes in this book including saving the earth, survival and family. On March 18, you can gain insights into this story by attending an interactive panel discussion of The Road that will explore both its literary and green aspects.

Panelists:

- Professor Katherine Cushing, SJSU
Director of Sustainability
- Professor Nick Taylor, Department of English and Comparative Literature, author of the prize-winning novel The Disagreement.
- Erik Olson, SJSU MFA student

Co-sponsored by the SJSU Campus Reading Program and the SJSU Office of Sustainability.

Free. Open to all members of the SJSU campus community.

SAN JOSÉ STATE UNIVERSITY

<http://www.sjsu.edu/reading>