Institutional Effectiveness and Analytics (IEA) is hiring a Student Research Assistant!

Overall: A great opportunity for a graduate student interested in applying social research methodology, particularly qualitative methods, to issues effecting higher education, such as student engagement, high-impact practices, diversity, and inclusion. Primary responsibilities will center on qualitative data collection, analysis, and reporting. Some exposure to quantitative research will also happen.

If you are passionate about using research to create positive change in higher education, this is the opportunity for you! IEA is focused on increasing the use of data and research findings at SJSU to improve practices and create a supportive learning environment for all students. An interest in pursuing social research jobs or doctoral studies is a definite plus!

Knowledge/Skills: Knowledge and passion for post-secondary teaching and learning, exposure to research on diversity and inclusion issues, and completed one college-level course in qualitative research methodology. Knowledge of computer/web-based software for qualitative coding and focus group facilitation skills are a plus. Both collaborative and independent work style depending on project and task.

Pay Rate: $17.50 per hour

Duration: Part-time (10-20 hours per week)/Academic year with possibility of summer term employment.
