

The Women's Crisis Center is proud to present:

'Hands-On Healing': A Display of Survivors' Strength and Resilience

In recognition of April's Child Abuse Prevention Month along with Sexual Assault Awareness Month, the Women's Crisis Center will be presenting an art show by survivors of violence. Art therapy utilizes creativity as a means of self-expression, self-actualization and empowerment. On display will be poetry, short stories, paintings, mandalas and much more!

As part of the show, there will be a community project where people can trace their hand and attach it to a banner. We invite each hand to be decorated by a survivor of violence, someone who wants to make a statement about violence or in remembrance of someone who has been a victim of violence.

We understand that this process can illicit a strong emotional response, so there will be counselors and staff available to speak with.

More information will be available on child abuse, sexual assault and domestic violence.
