

Who, Whom, Whoever, and Whomever

People often do not know when to use the pronouns “who,” “whom,” “whoever,” and “whomever.” However, with a simple trick, they will always choose the correct pronoun.

For this trick, use the following key:

who = she, he, I, they

whom = her, him, me, them

Who

In the following sentences, use the steps that are outlined to decide whether to use who or whom.

Example

Nicole is a girl (who/whom) likes to read.

Step 1: Cover up the part of the sentence before “who/whom.”

Nicole is a girl (who/whom) likes to read.

Step 2: For the remaining part of the sentence, test with a pronoun using the above key. Replace “who” with “she”; replace “whom” with “her.”

Who likes to read = She likes to read

Whom likes to read = Her likes to read

Step 3: Consider which one sounds correct. (Remember that the pronoun “she” is the subject of a sentence, and the pronoun “her” is part of the object of a sentence.)

“She likes to read” is the correct wording.

Step 4: Because “she” works, the correct pronoun to use is “who.”

Nicole is a girl who likes to read.

Whom

Example

Elizabeth wrote a letter to someone (who/whom) she had never met.

Step 1: Cover up the part of the sentence before “who/whom.”

Elizabeth wrote a letter to someone (who/whom) she had never met.

Step 2: Because the remaining part of the sentence has a subject (she) at the beginning, test with the pronouns at the end of the sentence. Replace “who” with “he”; replace “whom” with “him.”

She had never met who = She had never met he

She had never met whom = She had never met him

Step 3: Consider which one sounds correct. (Remember that the pronoun “he” is the subject of a sentence, and the pronoun “him” is part of the object of a sentence.)

“She had never met him” is the correct wording.

Step 4: Because “him” works, the correct pronoun to use is “whom.”

Elizabeth wrote a letter to someone whom she had never met.

Whoever

To figure out when to use the pronouns “whoever” and “whomever,” use the following key:

whoever = she, he, I, they

whomever = her, him, me, them

Example

Danielle said that she’d run with (whoever/whomever) was ready.

Step 1: Cover up the part of the sentence before “whoever/whomever.”

Danielle said that she’d run with (whoever/whomever) was ready.

Step 2: For the remaining part of the sentence, test with a pronoun using the above key. Replace “whoever” with “she”; replace “whomever” with “her.”

Whoever was ready = She was ready

Whomever was ready = Her was ready

Step 3: Consider which one sounds correct. (Remember that the pronouns “she” and “he” are subjects of sentences, and the pronouns “her” and “him” are part of the objects of sentences.)

“She was ready” is the correct wording.

Step 4: Because “she” works, the correct pronoun to use is “whoever.”

Danielle said that she’d run with whoever was ready.

Whomever

Example

Alice is friendly to (whoever/whomever) she meets.

Step 1: Cover up the part of the sentence before “whoever/whomever.”

Alice is friendly to (whoever/whomever) she meets.

Step 2: Because the remaining part of the sentence has a subject (she) at the beginning, test with the pronouns at the end of the sentence. Replace “whoever” with “they”; replace “whomever” with “them.”

She meets whoever = She meets they

She meets whomever = She meets them

Step 3: Consider which one sounds correct. (Remember that the pronoun “they” is the subject of a sentence, and the pronoun “them” is part of the object of a sentence.)

“She meets them” is the correct wording.

Step 4: Because “them” works, the correct pronoun to use is “whomever.”

Alice is friendly to whomever she meets.
