Course Description
Cultural anthropology is the study of how humans adapt to, interpret and affect the world in which they live. This course is designed to provide you with an overview to the discipline, as well as an appreciation of what it has meant to be human in different places at different times. By the end of the class, you should have a sense of the anthropological perspective and its merits. After learning some basic concepts and cross-cultural comparisons, we finish the class by showing the practical applications of this perspective in America and elsewhere. Furthermore, you will be gaining first-hand experience in observing the world as an anthropologist, giving you an experiential and intellectual appreciation of a perspective which can be used to better understand a variety of academic, professional, and community contexts.

The course satisfies requirements for the Human Behavior / D (1) Area in the General Education Core, as well as, departmental and program requirements in anthropology and behavioral science. There are no pre-requisites to this course.

Course Learning Objectives
Students who satisfactorily complete this course will:

1. Be able to apply appropriately the concept of culture to human behavior.
2. Gain a working knowledge of how cultural anthropologists conduct field research through completing a class project.
3. Be able to recognize and analyze the interaction of social institutions, culture and environment with individual and collective behavior.
4. Develop a cross-cultural perspective on how humans relate to each other and the material world through symbols.
5. Have knowledge about several societies in depth using ethnographies.
6. Understand the relevance of cultural anthropology for understanding the complexities of modern life both globally and in this country.

Area D1 Human Behavior Student Learning Objective

Students will be able to recognize the interaction of social institutions, culture, and environment with the behavior of individuals.

Required Texts/Readings

3) Stack, Carol (1997) All of Our Kin: Strategies for Survival in a Black Community

The books are available through the Spartan Bookstore and Amazon.com.

Classroom Protocol

- Please do not use your computers during class. Notes should be taken by hand. Exceptions will be made for students with documentation from the Accessible Education Center or with special permission from me.
- Please do not use your cell phones or MP3 players for any purpose during class. However, if you are expecting an important call you should notify me so we can make arrangements.
- I have a zero-tolerance policy for cheating and plagiarism; if you cheat or plagiarize you will fail the course! Incidences of cheating or plagiarism will be turned into the academic integrity office. Students are responsible for understanding and adhering to the academic integrity policy.
- If you miss a class, ask your fellow students for copies of their notes. If you need further help, please come to my office hours.

Student Responsibilities

- Download the syllabus/greensheet, course materials and assignments from CANVAS.
- Students will be informed about changes to the schedule ahead of time. Students are responsible for noting those changes.
- Read the guidelines carefully to ensure course assignments are completed according to instructions.
- Please write clearly and correctly; seek help if you need it. Please proofread your papers carefully. Reading your work aloud often reveals mistakes in syntax and spelling.
- All papers (homework assignments & ethnographic exercises) should be submitted twice:
  - Submit paper copy in class
  - Submit electronic copy through CANVAS
• Late papers will only be accepted with permission. Please note: five (5) points will be deducted for each day past the due date.

• If you know in advance that you will be unable to attend an exam, it is your responsibility to contact me immediately by either e-mailing, leaving a message for me in the Anthropology Department office, or by coming by during my office hours. Email is the best and fastest way to reach me.

• Only students with a documented excuse will be able to take a make-up exam.

• Students are responsible for understanding policies about adding, dropping, and incompletes.

• Students are responsible for being aware of assignment due dates, midterm dates, and the final exam schedule.

• If you have any concerns about your class performance or comprehension, see me in my office hours or schedule an appointment. I am always willing to help students and I care about whether students are grasping the material and enjoying the class.

Assignments and Grading Policy

Examinations: The exams will consist of multiple choice, True and False, Fill-in the blank, short answer and essay questions based on the lectures, videos and readings.

Ethnographic Exercises: These exercises are intended to develop your skills as an observer and interpreter of social life. These out-of-class exercises are intended to help you understand an ethnographic approach to understanding social phenomena. They will require some work, however, the activities ought to be thought provoking and fun. Instructions for exercises are available on CANVAS.

Homework Assignments: These short assignments engage critical thinking about themes covered in class. Homework Assignments 2, 3, and 4 require that you watch a film (See assignment sheets for assignments). You have several resources to access these films. They are available at the IRC for you to view there. However, to ensure all students have access to the films, they may not be checked out. You may rent the films (iTunes), watch them on Netflix, or on youtube. Be warned, if you opt for the youtube option, the films are posted in several sections.
