Course Description

This course examines human development and its physiological, psychological, and sociocultural contexts. It covers cross-cultural perspectives on infancy, childhood, adolescence, adulthood, old age, and the role of university education in the life span.
In this lower division lecture course on the human life-cycle, you will study and compare the life stages that all humans experience. You will also examine your particular life experience as an undergraduate student at San Jose State University. Since this is an anthropology course, particular emphasis will be placed on viewing the human experience in a holistic way from a cross-cultural perspective, particularly as it relates to your life as a student and your relationship to your peers. Using anthropological ethnographies, lectures and discussions we will examine the life experience of individuals from other cultures and across generations. Emphasis is placed on proper academic writing.

Learning Outcomes and Course Goals
GE Learning Outcomes (GELO)
Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:
1. Describe and analyze the interrelationships among physiological, social/cultural, and psychological dimensions of human well-being;
2. Think critically and communicate effectively about ethics and integrity in academic and non-academic settings;
3. Reflect upon their own experiences along dimensions of well-being and engage in activities that promote human wellness across the lifespan; and
4. Know how to access social and academic resources that enhance learning and facilitate positive interpersonal relationships with diverse groups and individuals.

Course Learning Objectives (CLO)
1. Students will be able to identify the authoritative voices that influence the decision-making processes relative to various life stages.
2. Students will be able to compare the way in which people from various cultures and historical periods choose to make decisions relative to the human life course.
3. Students will be able to develop a plan for their education at San Jose State University which will include comparing several potential majors, locating appropriate academic advisors, and investigating potential career opportunities.
4. Students will learn to write a college level essay which includes correctly cited material and a reference page.
