Course Description

Anth 231 Application Core. Methods for the analysis sociocultural systems, ethnographic evaluation, and program/design development. Emphasis on professionalism, project management, budgeting, ethics, and contracts (3 units).

This course is the first of the two-course Applications Core sequence in the graduate program in applied-practicing anthropology; the sequence is fundamentally about building basic skills in applying anthropology to "real world" problems. Students are first introduced to the history of applied-practicing anthropology, a tool kit of models for application, and the nature of ethical issues in applied work. We then develop skills in formulating social systems and the complex environments in which they exist. Next, the course explores evaluation research in anthropology, with a special focus on needs assessment and social impact assessment. In both cases the anthropologist leaves the realm of description and understanding, and makes judgments or assessments against some standards.

The course also facilitates the development of professional communication skills, and formulating problems that can be constructively addressed by anthropologists

Course Goals and Student Learning Objectives

Students who successfully complete this course will:

- 1. understand the history of applied-practicing anthropology and its relationship to specific organizations, public policies, and a larger social context;
- 2. know major models of applied-practicing anthropology;
- 3. be able to analyze the structure, functions, and processes of social systems using basic anthropological and social scientific concepts (e.g. social structure, roles, reciprocity, values, etc.);
- 4. be able to learn about the larger environments which affect social systems through literature searches, use of secondary data sources, and Internet resources;
- 5. understand basic principles and forms of evaluation;
- 6. be able to conceptualize and conduct basic needs assessments and social impact assessments:
- 7. be able to appropriately use forms of basic professional communication, such as memos, reports, executive summaries, etc.; and
- 8. be knowledgeable about ethical principles in anthropology and how to protect the rights of various stakeholders in their projects, as well as to recognize threats to ethical social research.

Classroom Protocol

Each class addresses a single, albeit often complex topic. Readings are assigned as per the class calendar below and you are responsible for completing them before class meets. You simply cannot contribute in a meaningful way without having read the material and either mastered it or be able to identify the questions that would help you master it. The goal for each class meeting is to synthesize the implications for the readings for the application and practice of anthropology in real world settings. Think of it as providing a high level introduction to some facet of application that you may then wish to explore in more depth as your own interests coalesce.

We will begin class sessions by summarizing the individual readings, so you should be prepared to do so. The time devoted to this exercise will vary wildly due to differences in the number of readings and their difficulty. I will be making sure that, in our zeal to discuss "big" (i.e. "academic") issues, we don't overlook points that are less exciting but that can be extremely helpful in the world of practice and application. The initial presentations will probably take about 60+ minutes, with varying patterns of lecture and discussion. Then we will discuss the larger issues raised by the readings considered individually and collectively. "Issues" here can be cross-cutting or underlying themes; questions or concerns; extensions or applications; epiphanies or insights; and strengths and weaknesses. Some critique is fine, but endless critique that results in a sort of paralysis of action is to be avoided. Eventually, you do something in applied anthropology and the goal of the course is to cultivate skills in getting on with it. You will be well-prepared to contribute issues since you will be developing them each week after you complete the readings. In this free-wheeling discuss phase, each of you will be asked to pose one or more issues for discussion and I will write them on the board. After some condensing/arranging, we will discuss as many ideas as possible and then summarize our discussions before we depart. Other sessions will break with this template if there are opportunities to explore the material and issues in different ways, such as working through challenges posed by actual projects.

Dropping and Adding

Students are responsible for understanding the policies and procedures about add/drops, academic renewal, etc. Information on add/drops are available at http://info.sjsu.edu/web-dbgen/narr/soc-fall/rec-298.html. Information about late drop is available at http://www.sjsu.edu/sac/advising/latedrops/policy/. Students should be aware of the current deadlines and penalties for adding and dropping classes.

Assignments and Grading Policy

- Discussion Synthesis (15%). Each of you will be asked to take notes on the issues discussion twice during the semester and to then prepare a synthesis of what was said that is useful to your colleagues. You will distribute it via paper or email the following week, and make sure I get two paper copies.
- 2. Weekly Participation (15%). This is a graduate class and it only works if everyone comes prepared and participates. Passive presence is nice, but it shifts the burden to other students so contributing your ideas is expected. Don't think about pleading introversion or shyness—I'm afflicted with both myself but manage to overcome them in professional settings like a class. However, don't obsess either. The semester is long and there will be many opportunities to participate. Always remember that (1) you cannot participate without attending and (2) thoughtful contributions are more valuable than seizing airtime.

- 3. Readings Syntheses (20%). Students will prepare a concise summary of each week's readings: summarize each reading (article or chapter; individual chapters, if the reading is a book) in 2-3 sentences. The test of a good summary is whether you could tell—say about a year later—what the material that you summarized was about and whether it would be worth rereading it for some purpose. Then propose at least five issues for the entire collection of readings that will serve to focus the evening's discussion. "Issues" may include questions, points of critique, implications, connections, good or interesting ideas, etc. You are especially encouraged to (1) think of how one article or chapter connects to another and (2) how the readings from different weeks connect. You may collaborate on preparing reading notes, but only individual submissions will be graded and there is a risk that cutting and pasting will be interpreted as cheating. Make sure your issues reflect the workings of your own mind. These must be turned in the week the readings are due unless you have made other arrangement with me. If you have trouble with this format, please let me know so we can address it quickly. The week number of the readings that your paper addresses is your paper title; the individual readings should also be provided as references before the body of the paper.
- 4. Application Scenarios (30%). Students will prepare three application papers based on scenarios provided by the instructor and following a template provided in class. The scenarios will be based on the topics we discuss throughout the semester and you will have at least a week to work on each assignment. Class input on length will be solicited, but the goal is to prepare concise, detailed, and "actionable" papers.
- 5. Final Exam (20%). Based on all readings and discussions, students will update their personal portfolio of applied-practicing anthropology methods and techniques that constitute the basis for their practitioner toolkit. This toolkit will be extended in ANTH 232.

Course grades will be assigned as follows: 100-90% = A; 89-80% = B; 79-70% = C; 69-60% = D; and below 60% = F. Plus and minus grades may be assigned at the instructor's discretion.

University Policies

Academic integrity

Students should know that the University's Academic Integrity Policy is availabe at http://www.sa.sjsu.edu/download/judicial_affairs/Academic_Integrity_Policy_S07-2.pdf. Your own commitment to learning, as evidenced by your enrollment at San Jose State University and the University's integrity policy, require you to be honest in all your academic course work. Faculty members are required to report all infractions to the office of Student Conduct and Ethical Development. The website for Student Conduct and Ethical Development is available at http://www.sa.sjsu.edu/judicial_affairs/index.html.

Instances of academic dishonesty will not be tolerated. Cheating on exams or plagiarism (presenting the work of another as your own, or the use of another person's ideas without giving proper credit) will result in a failing grade and sanctions by the University. For this class, all assignments are to be completed by the individual student unless otherwise specified. If you would like to include in your assignment any material you have submitted, or plan to submit for another class, please note that SJSU's Academic Policy F06-1 requires approval of instructors.

Campus Policy in Compliance with the American Disabilities Act

If you need course adaptations or accommodations because of a disability, or if you need to make special arrangements in case the building must be evacuated, please make an appointment with me as soon as possible, or see me during office hours. Presidential Directive 97-03 requires that students with disabilities requesting accommodations must register with the DRC (Disability Resource Center) to establish a record of their disability.
