Course Description

This 3-unit letter-graded course introduces Creative Writing graduate students to the resources, traditions, conventions, and literary culture associated with professional creative writing both inside and outside academia. The class will study the role of the individual writer within the literary and academic communities, and explore various forms of literary activity that commonly support “the literary life.” Students will learn to find and evaluate dominant and alternative literary magazines and publishers, book review indexes, academic journals, and online and other electronic resources. By means of this course, they will find ways to apply their knowledge of these resources that are useful in their own writing, in their other courses, and in fulfilling other requirements for the MFA. In the course you will work on projects that meet professional publication standards in the field. This course satisfied the GVAR requirement for earning an MFA degree in Creative Writing at SJSU.

Course Goals and Student Learning Objectives

Course Goals:

A creative writer’s work is both a personal journey toward increasingly masterful artistic expression as well as an increasing understanding of what the literary world requires of a writer as a professional, in an era of increasing digital publishing. In order to succeed, a Creative Writing MFA student needs to understand how the interlocking networks within the literary, academic, and publishing communities function. To gain such an understanding, students will accomplish the following objectives in this course:

- Complete a final portfolio (in hardcopy or digital form) by the end of the term containing finished drafts of the following assignments:
 - An annotated bibliography in MLA format of work published in a significant literary journal or an author on the MFA exam reading list (or an author you might add to the list);
 - A book review written to be submitted to a print or online journal or other book review-related publication;
 - A proposal for a paper or presentation at a literary or academic creative writing-related conference;
 - A 20-minute paper (approximately 10 pages) to be presented at a literary or academic creative writing-related conference (presented in class);
 - A personal literary essay—a more fully fleshed-out version of your conference paper—written to be published by a print or online journal, magazine, or anthology (3,000 – 3,500 words);
 - An MFA thesis proposal, proposing an imagined or real project you might propose for your actual thesis—written to the standards of the department’s Graduate Committee.
- Comment on drafts and revisions of other class members’ assignments posted on the 201C Canvas Online Site.
- Become familiar with a variety of literary journals, publishers, and electronic resources for creative writers in your genres.
- Examine the evolving genres of book reviewing, the personal literary essay, blogs, and literary forums on digital media.
- Investigate the future of digital literary tools and electronic literary publications.
- Gain a familiarity with some professional forums and networks for creative writers within academe and local literary networks in the Bay Area and California.
- Gain familiarity with various avenues for publication and other professional activity.
- Gain familiarity and experience writing a thesis proposal for the English Department Graduate Committee to approve.

Learning Objectives:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

Course Requirements and Assignments

SJSU classes are designed such that in order to be successful, it is expected that students will spend a minimum of forty-five hours for each unit of credit (normally three hours per unit per week), including preparing for class, participating in course activities, completing assignments, and so on. More details about student workload can be found in at <http://www.sjsu.edu/senate/docs/S12-3.pdf>.

Course Methods and Activities:

At the start of this course, each class member will select a literary journal or magazine whose pages contain significant works by contemporary writers. Or select a contemporary prose writer or poet. The writers whose careers the students will want to study are those who have established a publishing track record in both periodical publication and book publishing. Writers who publish in more than one genre would be most exemplary. You should expect to devote an average of 3 to 6 hours per week for this class to stay current with the assigned reading and writing. If you read more slowly, you should allow for more time.

Visits from Writers, Editors, and Publishers:

Our class will occasionally host visits by Bay Area and West Coast literary professionals who will make brief presentations and take part in Q & A about matters pertinent to the course material. Some presentations will be made by writing faculty from SJSU as well as writers teaching in other academic departments.

Reading List:

REQUIRED:

Charles Baxter, Burning Down the House: Essays on Fiction (Second ed.)

A NOTE ON LETTER GRADES: In English Department courses, instructors will comment on and the grade the quality of student writing as well as the quality of the ideas being conveyed. All student writing should be distinguished by correct grammar and punctuation, appropriate diction and syntax, and well-organized paragraphs (stanzas).

Grades given conform to the English Department and university grading policy. The Department of English reaffirms its commitment to the differential grading scale as defined by the SJSU Catalog (Grades-Letter Grading). Grades issued must represent a full range of student performance: A+/A/A- = excellent; B+/B/B- = above average; C+/C/C- = average; D+/D/D- = below average; F = failure. Within any of the letter grade ranges (e.g. B+/B/B-), the assignment of a + or - grade will reflect stronger (+) or weaker (-) completion of the goals of the assignment.

A note on plagiarism: Any case of suspected plagiarism or academic dishonesty will be reported to the office of Graduate Studies for further investigation.
