Do not hand write - Must be typed

A course expires exactly seven years after the posting of the grade. Once the seven-year time limit has elapsed for a course, the student should immediately contact his/her master's committee chair or the department graduate advisor. The revalidation exam should be administered by the original course instructor or another instructor in the same course. If these instructors are no longer available, revalidation should not be requested. The knowledge of the course material can be tested either by an oral or written exam. Note that changes in course content and the student performance in the course must be considered when selecting this option. If the student performed at lower than a "B" level in the original course or if the original course is no longer current, this option is not permitted.

There is a 9-unit limit on revalidations per student in a 30-unit degree program (30% of total allowed). Should additional courses expire, those courses must be retaken to graduate. Substitution of another course for an expired one is not permitted, as once a course appearing on the candidacy form is graded it cannot be removed from the form. An additional course might be acceptable to add with permission from the Associate Dean of Graduate Studies if the original course is no longer available; restrictions do, however, apply.

This completed form should be emailed to the appropriate GAPE evaluator (see www.sjsu.edu/gape/about_us/staff), submitted to Window G in the Student Services Center, or sent through interoffice mail to extended zip 0017.
