Just Released:

Advances in Global Leadership Volume 11, Emerald Publishing, continues to advance both global leadership research and practice by bridging and integrating conceptual, empirical and practitioner perspectives to provide a deeper understanding of this rapidly growing field of study. Part I presents innovative foundational research on global leadership processes, systematic bibliometric literature reviews, and a holistic approach to talent selection. Part II, the Practitioner's Corner, contains papers submitted in response to our call for global leadership development in university settings. The editors conclude with directions for future research as well as benchmarks for university global leadership programs and study abroad initiatives.

"For the past decade Advances in Global Leadership has landscaped the contours and the anatomy of this evolving field. Volume 11 builds on previous exemplary contributions by bringing together a judicious collection of theoretical and empirical manuscripts with several carefully chosen contributions tackling the perennial question of whether global leadership can be taught. I wholeheartedly recommend it to scholars and practitioners alike for both its accessibility and its insights." –Michael J. Morley PhD, Professor of Management, Kemmy Business School, University of Limerick, Ireland

Launch of the Global Leadership Fellows Pilot Program

Meet this Spring's Fellows!

Joining the Global Leadership Fellows this Spring are five outstanding San Jose State University students:

Jasveen Dhatt aspires to become a Global Leader, as she is fascinated with how business adapt to other cultures when they go global and how other cultures approach solving problems. She is currently interning at Smartcar in Operations.

Ben Drake is motivated to cultivate his soft-skills and people management in new ways that are mindful of diverse backgrounds and cultures. He is especially curious about Asian cultures. He currently runs his own small business for "alternate cycling apparel" called "Bikes N' Bullets" for Americans to express their military pride.

Dominique Harmon wants to meet new people, foster relationship-building, and expand her network, all while learning about different cultures. She has recently accepted a Marketing internship with Western Digital.

Vaishnavi Mahajan has a strong interest in International HR and Strategic Management, and is seeking a mentor that can help her hone her talents and learn about other cultures. She's been very involved with the on-campus IBA Outreach program.

Alma Reyes aspires to become a Global Operations Manager in Procurement / Logistics, and has an interest in strengthening her understanding of cultures and the way they do business. She currently works at Play-Well TEKologies involved with enrichment STEM for children.

During an exclusive luncheon on March 8th, they met Sheila M. Puffer, University Distinguished Professor at the D'Amore-McKim School of Business at Northeastern University, Boston, who is a leading Russian scholar and co-author of Hammer and Silicon: The Soviet Diaspora in the US Innovation Economy — Immigration, Innovation, Institutions, Imprinting, and Identity.

Thanks to Cindy Campbell, KLA made a $10,000 donation to help fund the Global Leadership Fellows Program for outstanding students!

The Global Leadership Company Consortium seeks to attract corporate sponsors to become partners in GLAC's Global Leadership Fellows Program, where exceptional SJSU undergraduate business students participate in comprehensive, cutting-edge global leadership skills development and training. Sponsoring companies gain access to GLAC retreats, workshops, peer-coaching, webinars, events, and design guidance on their in-house global leadership development, as well as mutual mentoring experience with student leaders to eventually fill their global leadership talent pipeline. GLAC seeks 10 such sponsoring companies to join the Consortium in 2019. For more information on becoming a sponsor, contact glac-group@sjsu.edu or Joyce Osland at (408) 924-3583.

The Fellows Program includes design thinking and social innovation in both local and global settings. It also incorporates global leadership competencies, mutual mentoring on diversity issues, and other unique opportunities/experiences.

GLAC extends a shout-out to our board members John Picone, Shareholder at Hopkins & Carley, and John Baird, Principal Partner & Chairman of Board at Velocity, for their dedication in spearheading the search for members of the Global Leadership Company Consortium. Thank you!

Founded in 2009, SJSU's Global Leadership Advancement Center offers programs to advance, foster, and disseminate cutting-edge global leadership knowledge and best practices to students, working professionals, and educators – around the globe.
