COURSE DESCRIPTION

A comprehensive study of sources, distinctions, and limitations relating to criminal law; the development of criminal law in the United States; the principles of criminal liability; the criteria considered in determining capacity and defenses; the various crimes and their elements.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. Understand the theory involved when determining what conduct is to be made criminal.
2. Distinguish between common law crimes and statutory crimes.
3. Distinguish between torts and crimes.
4. List and explain the general principles regarding responsibility and liability.
5. Describe the defenses available to those charged with criminal activity including such defenses as entrapment, alibi, duress, necessity and self-defense.
6. Recognize that a person may be guilty of an offense if the acts or conduct is part of the preparation for the commission of another offense and state the elements of the crimes relating to preparatory activity such as attempt, criminal solicitation and conspiracy.
7. List, define and interpret crimes against persons and crimes against property.

TEXTBOOK

Criminal Law, 6th Edition, (1999), Joel Samaha, West Publishing Co.

GRADING

Your final grade will be based on four exams, and five written briefs, plus optional extra-credit exam.

1. The four exams are objective: multiple choice and true/false. The questions are from the chapters in the text, the cases in the text, and lectures. The fourth exam will be during finals week. Exams = 80% of final grade.
2. Cases for the briefs will be assigned by me. (A brief is a summary and analysis of a case). All of the cases are in the text. An example of a brief will be given out in class. Briefs = 20% of final grade. To receive full credit for writing a brief you must submit it to me in class the day we discuss that case. Briefs turned in late will receive one letter grade lower. No briefs will be accepted after the date I return that particular case brief in class.
