Planet Earth faces some extreme environmental concerns in the coming years that will require humans to think deeply about who and how we are as a species among other species. There are serious ethical considerations and actions we as a species must take. This is the substance of the course in brief. We will consider mainstream ethical issues as well as other strategies from thinkers like Foucault that are not in the mainstream, but available online. This course welcomes all who have these same concerns. The material will be made accessible to all.
