

PHIL 195 section 01
Seminar in Philosophy of Law: Human Rights Law

Mo/We 3:00 PM-4:15 PM
San Jose State University
Sweeney Hall 241
Spring Semester 2020

Professor Andrew Delunas
andrew.delunas@sjsu.edu

A inquiry into contemporary philosophy of human rights law that considers several significant innovations in the progressive development of human rights.

- Is society under any obligation to provide reparations for past injustices?
- What are the most effective ways to promote human rights internationally?
- How can the global community work together to empower women?
- This course will examine the thought of Hannah Arendt, Jacques Derrida, and Emmanuel Levinas, among others.
- Develop your critical reading, writing, and thinking skills.

Prerequisite: Three units of Philosophy and upper division standing.