The Parthenon still stands in Athens, Greece and so does the central importance of Greek Philosophy to Philosophy and cultures worldwide. The originality and wide range of Ancient Greek thought is instrumental to understanding contemporary Philosophy. It has several interesting comparisons to the thought of the Chinese Sages such as Confucius, Lao Tze and Chuang Tzu. The main focus of this course will be on both Greek Philosophy from its earliest beginnings, as well as some amount of reflection on Greek culture as well. The emphasis will be on Plato and Aristotle. Given time, Roman Philosophers who followed the traditions of the Greeks, including the Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius, will also be considered. If one wishes to create new philosophy, one must always take account of the reassessment of the original questions and their answers.
