PSYC 105:

SUBSTANCE USE & PREVENTION
ACROSS THE LIFESPAN

T/TH 10:30-11:45 IN PERSON

INSTRUCTOR: DR. ERIN WOODHEAD

Psyc 105 is a special topics course in developmental psychology. Join us as we learn about developmental milestones at each stage of life that increase or decrease the likelihood that problematic substance use will develop. We will take a lifespan approach, discussing childhood, adolescence, early, middle, and older adulthood. This course combines clinical and developmental topics, including a review of age appropriate treatment options and prevention programs for substance use. Students must have taken Psyc 102, 112, or 114 as a prerequisite.
