"Boileau ... insisted that only gods, kings and heroes were worth writing about. I firmly believe that. The detailed accounts of the lives of clerks don't interest me much, unless, of course, the clerk breaks into heroism."
--JS/RB, 11 February 1933 (SLL, p. 69)
"Boileau was a wiser man than Mencken."
--JS/Carl Wilhemson, 9 August 1933 (SLL, p. 87)
"Boileau said that Kings, Gods and Heroes only were fit subjects for literature. The writer can only write about what he admires. Present day kings aren't very inspiring, the gods are on vacation and about the only heroes left are the scientists and the poor."
--JS/JHJ, [1939] (Bancroft)

"Boileau said, I believe, that only kings, gods and heroes were worthy of literature. I think this holds true still. Kings we do not have, gods we do not write about and heroes no longer come home with their shields or on them. But the pattern breakers come closest."

--JS/Joseph Fontenrose, 2 February 1949 (Bancroft)

"George [Milton, in OMM] is a hero and only heroes are worth writing about. Boileau said that a long time ago and it is still true."

--JS/ALW, 28 August 1957 (SLL, p. 563)

"Tragedy--true tragedy--is laughable unless it happens in a flat in Brooklyn. Kings, Gods and Heroes--maybe their day is over, but I can't believe it."

"We believed, as we must, that the laws of thought parallel the laws of things."
