Michael Palmer is a Director in PwC's San Jose office with the International Tax Services group. Michael began his career with PwC in the San Jose office, advising Silicon Valley's largest high-tech companies regarding various tax credits and incentives. Shortly after starting with PwC, Michael joined PwC's Quantitative Solutions team to assist multinational companies with data intensive tax computations. Michael has over 9 years of experience in international tax, with a focus in international tax compliance, Income Sourcing, Costs and Expense Allocation, U.S. manufacturing / export tax incentives and other various areas applying Internal Revenue Code Section 861. In 2007, Michael moved to PwC's Orange County office to service the growing market in Southern California. While in Orange County, Michael was recognized as PwC's Section 199 manufacturing deduction expert. As such, Michael actively educated Orange County companies in regards to the complexities and nuances of the Section 199 deduction. Recently, Michael returned to the San Jose office, focusing on companies throughout the Bay Area/Northern California with core international tax issues, specifically assisting companies with managing foreign tax attributes.

Michael is a CPA licensed to practice in the State of California. He is a member of the AICPA and holds a BS in Accounting, from Utah Valley University.
