Sierra County Human Services

Sierra County Human Services is the umbrella agency for Social Services, Public Health, Mental Health, Drug & Alcohol, and Environmental Health. Working closely with other county agencies, schools and non-profits, Sierra County Human Services is in the process of an exciting change. The goal of the agency is to transform traditional service delivery into a fully integrated program utilizing evidence based and promising practices.

Why work in Sierra County?

Sierra County is the home of stunning valley vistas and breathtaking lake and mountain scenery. The area was established during the gold rush and maintains much of its rich history.

Outdoor recreation enthusiasts and nature lovers will find a haven in Sierra County. The Pacific Crest Trail transverses the Lakes Basin, and the world famous Downieville downhill mountain biking trail offers epic single track riding. Trout fishing, hiking, biking and kayaking are favorite summer activities, while winter sports include cross country skiing, snowshoeing and snowmobiling.

Living and working in Sierra County offers other benefits as well: No traffic or traffic jams, and not even one traffic light in the county. Parking meters do not exist, and ample parking does. The air is fresh and clean, and the friendly small town atmosphere is a great place for families of all sizes and ages.

Sierra County offers a great benefit package including health, vision and dental care benefits, Employee Assistance Program, employer-paid life insurance and a generous PERS retirement package.

Where is Sierra County?

Sierra County lies at the northern end of the Mother Lode. It is bordered by Plumas and Lassen counties to the north and west and the State of Nevada to the east. Elevations range from 1,800 feet to 8,589 feet. The county seat, Downieville, is one of the quaintest towns in the North State and is on the western side of the county. On the eastern side is Loyalton, the only incorporated city in the county, and the population center. Reno, Nevada is just 45 minutes southeast of Loyalton and Truckee is just 45 minutes to the southwest.
