

TITLE IX REPORTING OPTIONS

Campus resources are available in the event that you or someone you know experiences sex- or gender-based discrimination or harassment, including sexual harassment, sexual misconduct, sexual exploitation, dating or domestic violence, stalking, or related retaliation. To learn more about SJSU's policies and procedures relating to Title IX, please use the QR code below in the Office for Title IX and Equal Opportunity box to visit the office's website.

The Office for Title IX and Equal Opportunity

Contact the Office for Title IX and Equal Opportunity for supportive resources such as academic allowances and No Contact Directives. The Office for Title IX and Equal Opportunity is also available should you want to initiate a university investigation. If you request a meeting with this Office, you will not be obligated to pursue any action; the purpose of the meeting is to ensure you know your rights and options.

Law Enforcement - UPD

SJSU's Police Department (UPD) investigates reports of sexual violence, dating violence, domestic violence, and stalking for potential criminal prosecution. If the incident occurred outside UPD's jurisdiction, UPD will refer the investigation to the law enforcement agency with appropriate investigative authority. A report to UPD does not require the name of a survivor or perpetrator be identified to the campus.

For Medical Assistance

You may seek medical care to test for sexually transmitted infections, pregnancy, or physical injury. Medical staff must report sexual and domestic violence to law enforcement, but that does not mean a survivor has to file a report.
