

UNDERSTANDING SUICIDE:

Talking about it is the first step

The Office for Equal Opportunity and Counseling Services invite you to participate in a dialogue about suicide. Participants will have the opportunity to develop an understanding of the topic, learn about proactive strategies and available resources to assist in prevention, and discuss how to reduce the stigma associated with receiving mental health care.

Our fourth and final lecture in a series of events for the spring semester, Diversity Dialogues are an opportunity for participants to explore topics that are unfamiliar to them or that are generally considered difficult to address. This will be done through a facilitation process that allows participants to inform and learn from one another while building mutual understanding. Diversity Dialogues welcomes students, faculty and staff to join in the conversation.

Lunch will be provided.
