Drafting and Formatting Your Proposal or Dissertation

You Don’t Have to Do Everything At Once

Three elements in your dissertation:

• Words (Content)
• Figures and Tables (Content)
• Formatting (Not Content)
Drafting and Formatting Your Proposal or Dissertation

A Suggestion

Work on your Content and your Formatting separately.

Why?
• They are separate processes.
• It’s easy to get all caught up in formatting before you need to do it.
  • Which slows you down.
A Possible Process

For Drafting and Formatting

Draft your words in Word using a simple, plain format.

Develop and design figures and tables in Word, Excel, or Powerpoint using the correct format.

Copy and paste your content into Word documents.

Format your document in Word.

Note: X’s indicate the topic emerged or was addressed in the interview.

Policy/legislation. Insufficient policy development and legislation was discussed by all respondents as the area most in need of improvement. Respondents noted that policymaking and legislation, because they are systemic in nature, affect all other factors impeding expansion and improvement of ECE programs and services, including funding, teacher workforce issues, and quality concerns. The constraint of policy/legislation is include here, with the recommendation that future studies pursue a more representative sample.

As Figure 1 illustrates, while all respondents agree that childcare/preschool should be considered an important investment for all children in California, and that it is not easy to find affordable, high-quality childcare/preschool throughout the state, the differences across political parties were significant (ps<.001, the threshold of significance when applying a Bonferroni correction).

Figure 1. Survey responses divided by political party (question 1). Reports responses to the following statements: “Policymakers should consider childcare/preschool an important investment in CA,” “All families in California should have access to free or subsidized childcare/preschool,” and “There is currently a lack of affordable, high-quality preschool programs in CA.”

In addition, Figure 2 illustrates, respondents also disagree on the extent to which childcare/preschool should be included in the overall education budget in California, or paid for by public taxes. Also, there are stark differences based on political party preference for whether families should bear the cost of childcare/preschool and whether...
